

Is Russian Rocket on Its Way Now?

Observatory to Keep Eye on Moon For Rocket Landing This Week

Alas, Our Poor Brother

It didn't take long for the press agents to get busy, once Russia's dog-carrying satellite was in the sky. These six assorted dogs bearing placards of protest paraded in front of the UN building in New York yesterday. But basically, the stunt was designed to attract attention to a big pet show opening later this month. See page 3.—(AP Photofax.)

If 'Living' Rises So Will Pensions

OTTAWA (CP)—Bill to boost old-age pensions from $46 to $55 a month was passed by the House of Commons last night.

Health Minister Monteith told MPs the pension would again be increased if living costs continue to spiral. "There's nothing final or sacred about the amount of $55," he promised.

A mysterious, brightly-glowing object was reported seen hovering at several places around the world yesterday.

At White Sands, N.M., an army lieutenant at the desert proving ground reported the sighting by two patrols of a huge, oval object "nearly as bright as the sun" near bunkers used in the first A-bomb explosion.

The object was spotted twice Sunday. Sightings were made 17 hours apart by two different military police patrols.

At Washington, the U.S. Air Force is investigating a huge and strangely-lighted mystery object reported to have flashed over West Texas. Most unusual thing about the object reported over West Texas was that witnesses said their car engines stopped and their lights went out when they drove near it.

MONTREAL—A bright falling object with a red head and blue along its body was observed by physics Professor Jacques Hebert of Ottawa University.

HONOLULU—The Fiji government reported three sightings of a dazzling object. Fijian witnesses said it dazzled them and made them feel weak as it hovered 20 feet above the sea.

In Levelland, Tex., James A. Lee, who has spent 20 years studying aerial phenomena, said he believes the object "was a space craft from one of the neighboring planets."

Canada's acting chief delegate Wallace Nesbitt last week called Russia's "little assembly" proposal a completely cynical approach.

Fire the Tight Money Men Bennett Advice to Fleming

Premier Bennett yesterday hinted that some federal government officials should be fired unless they heed Finance Minister Donald Fleming's opposition to tight money.

"I am pleased and happy the federal finance minister has condemned tight money in the Commons," said the premier yesterday. "I hope that it is heeded by the Bank of Canada. I hope it is followed by genuine action."

The premier added that if the Bank of Canada did not carry out the policy Mr. Fleming had set, the government "should move with great rapidity in reorganizing the bank."

"There was still time to do something," the premier said.

Eclipse Due Thursday On Red Anniversary

Possible landing of a rocket on the moon and a full eclipse of the moon will be watched for Thursday morning by scientists at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain, amid mounting speculation that a Russian rocket might well be already on its way.

Astronomers on duty will inspect the moon at intervals during the night with a small six-inch telescope, said Dr. R. M. Petrie, director of the observatory.

CLOSE LOOK

"We will put the big one on it if something peculiar shows up," he said. The 73-inch telescope brings into focus only a small portion of the moon at one time.

All the speculation about shooting a rocket to the moon so far is from this side of the Iron Curtain, Dr. Petrie said.

"I fancy if the Russians attempt a moon rocket, they will tell us so. I don't know why not."

Dumping of finely-powdered coloring matter by the moon rocket would be one way of proving success, he said.

A "big splash" of color some two or three miles across would be necessary for the small telescope at the dome to pick it out, he figured.

Astronomers, however, won't have any trouble seeing the eclipse, weather permitting. The earth's shadow will black out the moon entirely shortly after 4 a.m.

Dr. Petrie, who was at home without his records, did not have exact times, but said he believed the eclipse would start about 4:40 a.m. and reach totality shortly after six, just before the moon set.

In Las Cruces, N.M., Clyde Tombaugh, discoverer of the planet Pluto, said the Russians may already have launched a rocket at the moon.

"They would have to start several days ahead of impact time to travel by the most economical method," he said Sunday night. "If, therefore, they intended to land on the moon at or near the time of the lunar eclipse of Nov. 7 they may already have fired."

Nov. 7 is also the 40th anniversary of the Russian revolution.

versary of the Russian revolution.

An atomic bomb would be the best way to mark the surface of the moon, Dr. Fred L. Whipple, director of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory at Cambridge Mass., said today.

He said if a telescope were trained in the right direction at the right moment, the rocket might leave a trail on the scope.

In Moscow, Soviet scientists reported "all's well" with the dog space traveller aboard Sputnik II last night, and said the next such travellers might be anthropoid apes. Before the end of the century, a scientist said, 1,700-ton space ships would reach Mars.

Quit Dog Worry

CALGARY (CP)—A Calgary psychiatrist had an answer Monday night for dog-lovers worried about the animal in Sputnik II. Dr. Maurice Carnat suggested they start worrying about their own survival instead of the dog's.

"Rather than worry about the fact that all humanity is in danger these days some people refuse to face the reality of the situation," he said. "They express concern about one dog."

"Unless people soon start worrying about their own survival there won't be any dogs to be concerned about, and no humans to be concerned."

Wall Street Rides Second Satellite

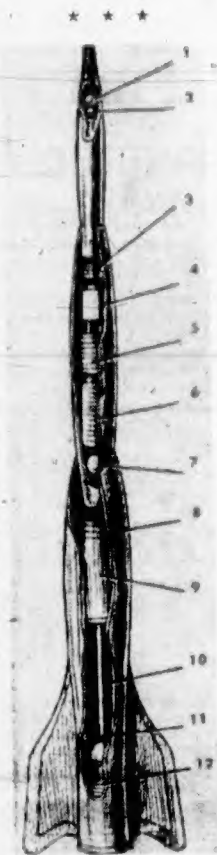

By HARRY YOUNG
Colonist Business Editor

Lightning never strikes twice in the same place on Wall Street reckoning, and the launching of the second Sputnik was a damp squib compared with the first, on stock market prices.

In the first hour of Monday's trading, prices were marked down sharply and the Dow Jones average showed a minus of nearly seven points.

Later, however, strong buying appeared in a number of defence stocks in anticipation of new defence spending by the government to meet the missile threat.

In the strong finish, the averages at New York, Toronto and Montreal almost regained their Friday close levels, and in the case of base metals at Toronto, a small gain was recorded on the session.

PROF. A. A. BLAGONRAVOV

LONDON (Reuters)—Professor Antoly A. Blagonravov, head of the Soviet satellite project, is quoted by the Daily Mirror as saying the dog in the second Russian satellite is doomed.

The newspaper's science correspondent says he telephoned the professor in Moscow Monday. He asked:

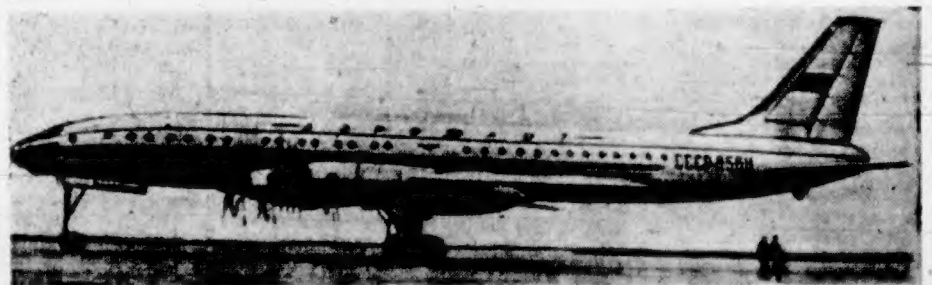

"Is there some braking system in Sputnik II to enable it to return to earth?"

Blagonravov told him: "There are no brakes."

The correspondent asked: "Will the dog return to earth?"

The professor said: "No."

"Will it die in space?" Professor Blagonravov replied: "Yes."

Reds Unveil 'World's Biggest Aircraft'

Russia claims that this sleek giant is largest aircraft in the world. Unveiled yesterday in Moscow, the TU114 can carry 120 passengers from Moscow to New York in 10-12 hours, or 220 on short flights.

The monster plane, which makes the two men at right seem like pygmies, is powered by four turboprop jet engines, twice as powerful, it's claimed, as any outside Russia.—(AP Photofax.)

U.S. Fact Finders Meet Premier

A 12-man U.S. fact-finding committee appointed by President Eisenhower to explore means of providing transportation links with Alaska through B.C. conferred with Premier Bennett and other government officials here yesterday.

Among the subjects discussed was the provincially-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway but there was nothing to suggest that the U.S. group would like to acquire it as part of a rail link with Alaska. Sen. Warren G. Magnuson of Washington State said later that the sale of the PGE was not discussed.

Parking Squeeze

Curb Misuse Curb Sought

Victoria's parking headaches can only be solved by a major overhaul of curb use in the downtown area together with immediate steps to provide off-street parking, according to city engineer James Garnett.

Rerouting Suggested

Rerouting of traffic to eliminate much of the danger at the Bay, Cook and Blackwood intersection will be recommended to city council by the public works committee.

The present five-point intersection would become a straight four-point intersection by forcing traffic north along Cook to Haultain before allowing it to move onto Blackwood.

Blackwood, from Haultain to Bay, would be a one-way street southbound into town.

Public works committee heard a lengthy written report from Mr. Garnett at a meeting yesterday.

Mr. Garnett suggested that parking meters be removed block by block so that all the requirements of the new Motor Vehicle Act may be more easily observed. This would eliminate 200 meters.

He said the parking space should be 22 feet in each case instead of the present 19 to 20 feet. This would eliminate a further 75 meters.

Another provision in the new act calls for three 35 to 45-foot loading zones to be provided in each 600-foot block and up to two such loading zones in shorter blocks. This would eliminate 100 meters.

"An almost complete lack of shopper parking space is causing serious competition between motorists, buses and commercial vehicles all trying to find accommodation at the curb," he wrote.

Five Climbers Fall to Death

BERCHTESGADEN, Germany (AP)—Bodies of five young mountain climbers were recovered yesterday at the bottom of a 600-foot cliff in the Bavarian Alps from which they plunged to their death Friday.

Mountain rescuers carried the victims, including three girls, down the high crevasse into which they fell while trying to scale 6,201-foot Untersberg.

Where Did You Go? Out

Didn't Everybody Have Vacant Lot?

By ROBERT PAUL SMITH
Chapter Eight

(A clear and engaging look back into childhood, the best-selling book, "Where Did You Go?" "Out," "What Did You Do?" "Nothing," continues here today.)

There is a man in our town, and he is wondrous wise. All I know about him is that he is reported to have said in conversation that the trouble with kids nowadays is that there are no vacant lots. He must be a good man, and I am sure he must mean by vacant lot the same thing I do.

The first thing to understand is that the only thing a vacant lot was vacant of was a house. Outside of that minor lack, a vacant lot was the fullest place you ever saw. Officially, I suppose, we lived in our houses. When challenged by authority for vagrancy, we gave our street address.

At the beginning there were two vacant lots, one across the street, and one at the corner. I was in the stage of running at the nose and being told to go away and not be a pest, of being urged to go anywhere other than where you were, on rare occasions, being allowed to chase a ball across the street and run back with it and deliver it to an eight-year-old giant, of being rounded up with the other little kids and herded into a hut and tortured, when they put houses up on that vacant lot.

Tarred Hair

Either I lived on a block full of apprentice sadists or it was the norm, but one of the amusements of the bigger kids, when all else failed, was to collect a batch of small ones and tie them up, put ice in their pants, pepper in their nose, tar in their hair. I will deal with this more fully under the heading of Clothesline.

In any event, by the time I was a full-fledged citizen, the vacant lot was the one at the corner. Its first feature was a rockpile. I am trying very earnestly to figure out whether the rockpile was the remains of an ancient foundation, or the debris of an unfinished foundation. I lean towards the latter, or possibly some contractor had a load of stone left over, or a load of stone to haul away from a blasting, and dumped it on the vacant lot.

We didn't know. It was there. Didn't everybody have a vacant lot on the corner, and wasn't a vacant lot a lot with no house and a rockpile on it?

Three Miles Across

The rockpile was shaped roughly like the crater of a volcano. We mostly sat on the rim, and we mostly built fires at the bottom. It was, roughly, three miles across from lip to lip when I first went there. Later on, it got smaller. The lot itself had a path through it hacked out of the living jungle, and about halfway through there was a rock too big to take out of the path, and this very minute I can feel my ankle twisting in the sneaker with the black circle over the ankle bone.

Tarzan, of the Apes lived on that lot. I was cavalier a few lines before. We were never so familiar as to call him just plain Tarzan—it was always Tarzanoftheapes. For the benefit of the misguided youth who encounter this real, the original, the blower-in-the-bottle Tarzanoftheapes was not Elmo Lincoln or Johnny Weissmuller or any of their heirs and assigns. Tarzanoftheapes was not a character in a comic strip or in a radio or television show. He was a creature of the imagination, sketched out by Edgar Rice Burroughs with (as we found out later) a more-than-generous unwilling assist from Rudyard Kipling, at 50 cents a throw.

He Was Much

Burroughs created a workable sketch in books; it was fleshed, given spirit and body and habitation by us. In a very real sense, Tarzanoftheapes existed; during the day he was Mitch, the kid next door, who had muscles and a disregard for broken bones. At night he was me, who had less muscles, but more imagination. I ad-libbed Tarzanoftheapes. With Mitch I went strictly according to the book. Once in a while, Mitch would let me be Tarzanoftheapes.

fectly convinced that we had built a boat.

And perfectly clear in another section of our minds that we had hauled an orange crate ten blocks and stuck it in a muddy brook and gotten wet up to our armpits and were going to catch you know.

Let's get back to the lot. Tarzanoftheapes. Mowgli, Huck Finn, the Boy Allies, the Motor Boys, Joe Bonomo, General Pershing, Theodore

Well suited to riding rockets are these Siberian laika dogs, miniature huskies. The laikas (Sputnik II carries a female of the breed, named Laika) are small and light, and have thick double coat that can withstand heat as well as cold. They are tough and placid.

All Depend on Dogs

Insulin, Lipstick And Space Flight

NEW YORK (UPI)—Scientists yesterday defended the Russians' use of a dog in their Sputnik II to blaze a trail for man into space.

They said the safety of many things, ranging from lipstick to life-saving insulin, depends on laboratory tests involving dogs and other animals.

Without monkeys, scientists said, there would be no Salk anti-polio vaccine. Work on dogs has provided great strides in cancer treatment, and nearly every surgical technique now in use was tried out first on dogs in laboratories.

The Sputnik is just a flying laboratory, scientists said, and when the time comes, Americans will probably send animals aloft in their own satellites before venturing into space themselves.

LONDON (AP)—The Soviet embassy told outraged British dog-lovers yesterday many humans had volunteered to travel into space aboard Sputnik II, but a dog was sent instead because "the sacrifice could not be accepted."

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. (AP)—A defence department official says a U.S. satellite to be launched in March probably will carry insect life but not a dog.

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver's dog lovers have been asked by the Tailwaggers Club here to parade with their pets this afternoon to observe a one-minute silence in sympathy with the dog in the Russian moon.

Victoria branch of the SPCA agrees with a Vancouver SPCA official who said the United States protest against Russia's use of a dog in the satellite project could well be directed against the U.S. itself.

Len Page of the Victoria branch said the city SPCA executive supported the comment of Tom Hughes, secretary-manager of the Vancouver SPCA: "The Americans have been using animals in similar research for years. If the U.S. SPCA wants to protest, the place to start is at home."

Canada Takes Hard Look At Defences

OTTAWA—Russian launching of earth satellites will bring on a sweeping reappraisal of Canadian defence policy.

A policy began soon after the Conservatives took office but it will be intensified. Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Monday that launching of the second satellite should act as a new spur for Western pooling of scientific information.

LONDON—British newspapers described the new Sputnik as "fantastic," "breath-taking" and "unbelievable." The Daily Mail says: "Nothing but a big, joint effort will suffice to overtake the Soviets. Nothing less will save the West."

WASHINGTON—Despite a renewed congressional clamor for a speed-up in U.S. missile programs there were strong indications that administration officials would cling to the sit-tight attitude they defended when Russia's first earth satellite streaked around a startled world.

MONTREAL—Perfecting space travel is "a futile waste of money," says Sir Herbert Read, British critic and poet. Give me a scientist who can double the rice crop in India rather than one who can make a Sputnik," he said.

WASHINGTON—The air force disclosed the purchase of four black bears but emphatically denied that the animals are destined for flights into space. A spokesman said the man-sized animals will join other wildlife used at the Aeromedical Field Laboratory at Holloman Air Force Base, N.M.

WASHINGTON—Russia's new satellite may bring her propaganda benefits by directing the attention of the world away from such internal problems as the downgrading of Zhukov, officials said here.

OTTAWA—There can be "no doubt" that Russia possesses the technological ability to launch a moon-circling rocket, says Dr. Peter Millman of the National Research Council.

OTTAWA—Canadian scientists have tracked the orbit of Sputnik II, says Canada's top International Geophysical Year scientist, Dr. D. C. Rose.

WASHINGTON—A top U.S. rocket expert doubts reports the Soviets used any radical new source of power in launching Sputnik II. The expert, who asked to remain anonymous, labeled as "idle speculation" reports that the Russians may have used power such as the fusion that takes place in a hydrogen bomb.

'Quite a Shock'—Pearson

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Russian launching of a dog-carrying satellite into space was described Monday by Hon. Lester B. Pearson as "the most far-reaching scientific development of our time."

But while Sputnik launchings have "given quite a shock to everyone," Mr. Pearson denied at a press conference—a Russian claim that intercontinental rockets developed by Russia have made Western European military bases obsolete.

The 1957 Nobel peace prize winner and former Canadian external affairs minister said

Sputnik launchings undoubtedly will expedite American efforts in this field.

"In six months the United States will launch its satellite," he said. World tensions then will drop back to pre-Sputnik days.

Commenting on Communist party chief Nikita Khrushchev's claim—broadcast by Moscow Sunday—that Russian military missile developments have made obsolete Western defence bases ringing the Soviet Union, Mr. Pearson said: "Khrushchev sometimes talks loosely. I'm sure he is quite anxious to see Western countries feel that their defence efforts have been wasted."

"Don't think for a minute they are obsolete, because the United States still has the ability of manning a massive solution."

Mr. Pearson said "fear created by Russian advances and power have brought NATO countries closer together."

"We can thank Khrushchev for the fear that is cementing the nations together to search for a solution."

The Challenge

THE shock to the Western world of the first Sputnik lessened the impact of the second earth satellite the Soviet Union has sent into the stratosphere, but the latter achievement adds greatly to Russian credit. It emphasizes the tremendous technological strides the Soviet Union has made in this realm of scientific research, which have left the Western world behind. No humming or hawing or biased belittlement can gainsay that.

The striking factor of the second Sputnik is the inclusion in the satellite of a living creature, a dog, apparently behaving well as the satellite circles the earth. This points to the possibility of future human travel in space, and must be regarded as a Soviet triumph of a high order. There is also the realization that the second Sputnik is six times as heavy as the first and its orbit twice as far out in space. Nothing of this nature the West has in immediate prospect is anywhere near the Soviet success.

Purely in the abstract and as a geo-physical experiment the Soviet satellites are cause for immense wonder but the deeper implications are more important. Western experts may attempt to separate them from the development of military ballistic missiles but the relation of the two cannot easily be dismissed. The satellites are proof positive that Soviet technology is far ahead of what had been expected and it may safely be assumed that rocket research of all kinds is also at an advanced stage.

The situation is the more amazing because 40 years ago Russia was largely illiterate and wholly without technical accomplishment. Doubtless the Soviet Union's tremendous scientific strides owe much to German scientists co-opted in the postwar years, but equally obvious must be the large force of trained native technicians now at the disposal of Soviet authorities. Russian methods are totalitarian and in this respect they cannot be matched by the West, but unpalatable though it may be these have produced graduates highly educated to Soviet aims and purposes, and in short order.

There is now more need than ever for the pooling of Western brains and technological skills. The West cannot afford the fetish of security to prevent a free exchange of scientific knowledge between allies. The NATO nations have the capacities but these must be harnessed together if the West is to catch up with and surpass the Soviet Union. This is the challenge which the Russian earth satellites present, and these have such latent implications that it can be ignored only at future peril. As Mr. Lester Pearson said only on Sunday, even if one regrets that he never spoke as forcefully when he was external affairs minister, "... A car in every garage, frozen food in every electric refrigerator and kissproof on every lip—these things will not bring us victorious through competitive co-existence." There must be a greater dedication to the stern business of equalling the militant and scientific achievements of the Soviet Union.

Refusal to Look

THE refusal by Oak Bay and Esquimalt to take part in the work of an intermunicipal committee to study the merits and demerits of civic amalgamation in the Greater Victoria area is difficult to understand. The more that either of these municipalities objected to the thought of any civic union now, the more valuable would have been its representatives on the inquiring body and the more rounded out the basis of any subsequent report. Nothing in the suggested inquiry could commit any municipality to action against its will. A refusal to look, however, would seem to be an unimaginative action.

Whatever may be ahead for Victoria and its municipal neighbors, they are all bound up in it. The spread of population, growth of vehicular traffic, expanding needs for police and fire patrols, assurance of safe practices in public health, sheer accommodation for future schooling —is there a single issue in which any of them can today afford to push up a border wall and peer hesitantly over it with a periscope? We have not yet heard one of these municipalities complain over the proffered help of any of its neighbors when the need for that arose. It is a strange attitude, however, which would hold itself aloof from a union of minds in a straightforward public inquiry.

Amalgamation may have its good points and its bad, but we shall never learn much about it in this area unless civic representatives seriously set themselves to the task of examining it. Mayor Scurrell and Reeve Ash are urging that such an inquiry, regardless of its findings, should be commenced now as something affecting not only the several municipalities, but also the capital city community in its fullest sense. It is a commonsense proposal that thought at least be given to the subject, and in time. Edit — Proof SG — The Challenge

Chiselling in High Places

AS in housekeeping, the sum of small economies in government spending can be a substantial saving for those who have to pay the bills, and it is satisfactory to note that the Conservative government at Ottawa is putting a stop to some of the minor extravagances of the past. One of the latest evidences of this "new broom" economy is an order to the Queen's Printer to cease supplying Christmas greeting cards free to federal cabinet ministers, deputy ministers and the chairmen of government boards. That instruction may be the first intimation the taxpayers have had that for years they have been buying greeting cards to make good fellows of high-placed officials who could very well afford to buy their own.

By discontinuing the practice the government may not be saving an enormous amount of money, but when one considers the price of high-grade Christmas cards these days and the numbers sent out from government offices to business houses, organizations and individuals this annual bill for messages of good cheer must have been quite impressive at that. When one stops to think, too, it stands out as an example of colossal nerve. Those who have been getting this free service from the government printing bureau have in effect been billing the recipients for uninvited expressions of friendship. There is nothing against ministers and others holding government office trying to create good will by sending out season's greetings but if they want to do that it should be at their own expense.

Interpreting the News:

Syrian Protest Whittled

By LLOYD McDONALD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

THE CURRENT Middle East dispute between Turkey and Syria has tended to create outside the United Nations a disquieting first impression that the UN assembly has been trying to sidestep the issue. If this is true how will this attitude affect its future use in international disputes?

The diplomatic answer is that there was no intention of evasion during the assembly debate on the controversy, but that most delegations felt any hasty action by the assembly as a whole would be the real threat to the body's future.

There appeared to be a belief the entire issue was over-emphasized as a general threat to peace with the over-emphasis coming particularly from Syria, who put the question to the assembly as an injured party, and from Russia who backed her to the limit during the discussion.

There was no doubt the United States also had a strong hand in privately shaping the course of the debate, which tended until last Wednesday to bypass any formal intervention. The U.S. apparently felt her own position in the Middle East was shaky, and that Washington's leadership in any formal UN move involving an Arab state would line up the others more solidly against her.

Most delegations outside the Soviet bloc hailed the mediation offer of King Saud as a good possibility of getting the two sides together in their own local area and keeping the border dispute from becoming a source of big-power tension between Washington and Moscow.

Thus there was a persistent reluctance among the majority of members to have the assembly take a vote on involving the UN in any way. There was the added fear that even a vote, which might numerically favor the Western position that Turkey was not really threatening her southern neighbor, would have only the effect of showing up the assembly as a divided body, since the Soviet bloc, certainly Syria and probably some of the other Arab states would vote against it.

Instead, the West continued expressing support for Saud's mediation efforts long after Syria had indicated her disinterest in them. And there was hope the debate would end in nothing more than speeches.

Such a negative result was considered all to the good by the West. The position of most middle powers was that no harm would result and that the situation would resolve itself anyway, since they expressed full belief in Turkey's assurance no aggression was planned.

Syria formally tabled a resolution for an investigating commission to visit the disputed border—and report back within two weeks. This forced the hand of the proponents of the hands-off assembly policy, and the official motion by Canada and six other smaller and middle powers calling for the intervention of Dag Hammarskjöld, UN secretary-general, followed immediately as a counter-move.

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

HE is at it again; that lord called Altrincham, I mean. Having been lifted to notoriety from the obscurity of a small journal he doesn't know when bad is enough.

The subject is his favorite carp—the Queen; this time her North American visit. "Some of her television speeches didn't come up to his snuff; others suggested she might be a TV star."

Since he seems able to rationalize any queer thought the contradiction of this is probably beyond him. More surprising however is the fact he is joined by the Toronto Daily Star, which complains that the Queen's speeches are dull, her voice negative and only fair.

There is no pleasing some sour souls.

It's all a matter of opinion, of course; the Star took a poll of its readers; 73 per cent of them thought the Queen's speeches excellent or good.

I imagine most fair-minded Canadians would agree with that assessment. Something else should be said, however. I don't know the habit of lords in England but it's not the habit of Canadian newspapers to criticize the speaking qualities of notable guests.

The Queen while in Canada was in one of her realms but she was also a guest; it is therefore bad taste to attempt publicly to dissect her. It is one thing for critics to assail the monarchy as such, the role it plays, the protocol surrounding it, its validity as an institution. It is surely something else again to snipe at the Queen as a person.

Frankly, since she is a decent, comely individual I think it's contemptible—and she can't answer back.

Why doesn't Lord Altrincham take on Nancy Astor and the Toronto Star take on Charlotte Whitton?

There is small warrant for finding fault with the Queen's North American speeches, anyway. She did a jolly good job of her speaking.

She may not be the world's finest orator, but who is? Not Lord Altrincham or the editor of the Toronto Star. I'm willing to bet.

The Queen's voice is naturally high-pitched. That's the way with human beings, you know. Some people have deep voices, some have light ones. That's why there are contraltos and sopranos, basses and tenors, in the world.

But there is every evidence the Queen is doing her utmost to speak as pleasantly as she can, and only a censorious person would deny that she performed well during her visit to this continent.

Why in any case should anyone expect her voice to be other than it is; it's the one she was born with. I hear far less pleasant voices every day of my life.

As a matter of cold fact many public speakers, some of them at the game all the time, can't match the Queen. Nor read a speech half so fluently, either.

It's time these critics made a record of their own voices; that would shut most of them up in a hurry. Or, perhaps, that Prince Philip throw protocol out of the window and gave his wife's detractors a taste of their own medicine.

They are a poor shoddy lot if you ask me, indulging as they do in personalities, at the expense of a lady who is unable to reply.

Reports from Ottawa

AFTER three weeks of Parliament the good men in the new cabinet are beginning to stand out. And none looks better than Justice Minister David Fulton and—this may surprise you—Transport Minister George Hees.

It was only to be expected of Fulton, candidate for the party leadership last year and long recognized as a corner. But of Hees, no. The Liberals used to deride him, "Pretty boy Hees," they'd chant from the government benches. They wrote him off as having nothing on the ball except money and good looks.

The metamorphosis of Hees from political dilettante—he is worth about $4,000,000, it is said—to one of the strong men of the government not only has amazed all parties including his own, but it has shocked the Liberals.

With two former transport ministers in their ranks, the Grits had expected to make political hay at Hees' expense. Of course, they may yet. But as of now Hees has them stopped cold.

Last week the Liberals thought they had Hees. Former minister Lionel Chevrier pressed him on the firing of a canal employee for working for the Liberals in the election. CCF leader Coldwell damned the firing as "undemocratic." Chevrier agreed. Neither could recall any precedents. Hees looked dismayed, apprehensive, frightened.

Then he got to his feet, but he had no quavering apology to offer. Instead he calmly all the Liberals' threats by reading a statement from the records of the Commons 19 years ago in which former agriculture minister Jimmy Gardiner had condoned and permitted such firings. He read a letter written by the then transport minister, C. D. Howe, in which Howe stated he had discharged a transport department employee for working for the Tories and had given the man's job to a Liberal.

Then to Coldwell's embarrassment, Hees pointed out that the CCF leader had participated in the 1938 debate on the subject of firings for political activity.

One reason Hees has been able to handle his critics is that he has one of the Tories' sharpest political brains at his elbow. His executive assistant is Mel Jack, former private secretary to John Bracken, who was fired by George Drew ostensibly for master-minding Hees' election to the presidency of the PC Association in 1954. Also behind the firing was the fact that Jack was a "Diefenbaker man" in the days when Drew considered that treason.

When Diefenbaker became prime minister, Jack deserved better than an executive assistantship to the minister of a second-rank department. It might be a fair guess that Diefenbaker assigned him to Hees to keep Hees out of trouble.

But Hees' success in rebuffing trouble has not been due entirely, or perhaps even mainly, to Jack's efforts. Jack of course prepares ammunition like that Hees used to demolish Chevrier on Tuesday, but Hees' excellent handling of the situation was all his own. It denotes a natural flair for politics which has developed rapidly in him since he was given real responsibility.

When Hees entered the cabinet he initiated and has kept to a rigorous work schedule that gets him to the office by 7 or 7.30 in the morning, and often keeps him there late at night. He can handle his critics because he has done his homework.

"George Hees," commented a CCF MP, "is one of the real finds of the Tory party."

Confession of Faith

By GREGORY CLARE

THIS is a confession of faith. During recent weeks I have been telephoned, written to and met on the streets by people infuriated with the public attacks in the press on Her Majesty the Queen. One of these critics is a journalist with the improbable name of Muggersidge; the other a lord whom I looked up in Burke and found to be the second generation to hold the title, and that his family name is almost as witty as Muggersidge, being Grigg, which in the Highlands means a cricket or flea, depending on how large it is. I am always delighted with such discoveries.

Against the chirps and nips and murrings of recent weeks we must set up the larger sounds which accompanied the Queen on her visit. The fact is, we would not be British without our Griggs and Muggersidges. We have indeed had worse, whenever we executed or banished or exiled those who, for a time, had been the holders of our symbols, the crown, the sceptre, the orb and the sword. There is something close to religion in the attitude of most of us towards the Throne. The Crown is the semi-religious symbol of our history and our destiny. We can, and have done so, removed the holder, and the crown remains miraculously suspended while we insert another bearer under it. But whoever bears it—has our devotion, even, as the past two generations have shown, unto death.

There are some among us who suppose "British" to apply only to the Isles. But they don't know the story. The Roman legions which occupied and peopled Britain for three centuries, which is longer than the New World has been occupied, were 6,000 strong, each with 10,000 camp followers and sutlers; and they consisted of Asians, Macedonians, Egyptians, Greeks, Gauls, from wherever the legion happened to be last stationed and recruited. After the Romans came the Norse pirates; then the German Saxons; then the Normans, who spoke French for the time being. After them, the tireless procession of refugees, escapees, exiles from all over creation, seeking freedom under that mystical crown, sceptre, orb and sword.

Who are we? We shall never know. We come out of that vast melting pot of invaders, refugees, pirates, exiles of two thousand years, with certain symbols we have conceived. And when the bearer of those symbols walks among us, we stand up and sing.

Not So Easy

Racial Integration

By LEWIS MILLIGAN

THE problem of integrating white and colored pupils in American schools is not so easy of solution as many Canadians think. It is all very well for us who are not involved in that problem to assume a holier-than-thou attitude towards the white people of Little Rock and other parts of the Southern States where the colored population in some instances is as large as, if not larger than, the white. If we in Canada were in the same position we would be no more in favor of racial integration than the white people of the South are.

That word "integration" means much more to them than a system of education. What white parents fear is racial blood integration of their children with the colored pupils as a result of their intimate association in mixed schools. Whatever may be said against that fear as an assumption of racial superiority and a denial of equality of citizenship, it is purely a matter of natural selection. The two races have got along fairly well together since the abolition of slavery, and they realize their mutual dependence upon each other in industrial life. They work side-by-side in factories and business generally, and compete on an equal basis in popular sports. They are not denied education, for there are colored schools that they can attend.

From what I have seen of large cities in the United States there is no residential integration of white and colored people. Harlem in New York is an outstanding example. In Indianapolis, which I visited recently, I saw entire blocks of houses that were exclusively occupied by colored people. They seemed to be happy together and I was told that many of them were very prosperous, owning their homes and driving their own cars.

Generally speaking, the pure-blooded negro is the happiest man in the world and is free from any inferiority complex. He prefers to live and associate with his own people. It is usually the half-caste who is the trouble-maker. He seems to be at cross purposes with himself; being neither one nor the other entirely, he feels that he has had a raw deal in his birth. I was told that the half-whites were by no means favored by the full-colored people, probably because they are inclined to pride themselves on their mixed blood.

There is no doubt that the average American still regards the negroes as an inferior race. A few years ago I met a Canadian while fishing in the Kawartha Lakes who had spent half his life in the States. He was an elderly man of a kindly disposition who had retired after a successful business career and had an orange grove in Florida. He told me that he employed negroes on contract to pick and pack the oranges and in cultivation work. I asked him to tell me what he candidly thought of the negroes.

"Well," he said, "a negro is a negro. But they are all right when they're kept in their place. They're good workers and are happy at their work. When they're all together picking in the grove one will start singing, 'O Lord!' and they'll all join in a chorus. Yes, we get along all right with them and they are well paid." Then, after a long pause he turned to me and said, "We couldn't do without the negroes, you know."

And that last remark is true. The colored American is already an integral part of American industrial, commercial and professional life. If he has not been integrated socially it is because he is a negro and the white people prefer to associate with their own kind, just as we do here in Canada.

We cannot truthfully claim that there is no color line in the social and fraternal life of Canada. One need not go into details, but, speaking generally, Canadians have no more desire to mingle socially with the comparatively few negroes in the population than have the white people of the United States.

Thankless World

SEVENTY-EIGHT people were saved from the electric chair by the genius of their lawyer, Samuel Leibowitz. Not one even thanked him! Clarence Darrow saved two men from the electric chair. Wealthy relatives, he tells us, jaggled bitterly about a modest fee.

Art King found jobs for 2,500 people through his radio program, "Job Centre of the Air." Only 10 ever thanked him!

Letters to the Editor

Case for Auditorium

In its excellent editorial comment on the Capital Region Planning Board's suggestions for a new civic centre as released on Oct. 28, the Colonist drew attention to the fact that an auditorium was not mentioned as a component or even, apparently, considered in conjunction with the project. The board is anxious to emphasize that, while the auditorium was certainly not mentioned, it was, with equal certainty, considered. The auditorium was omitted from the Civic Centre Plan for two main reasons.

Firstly, although the need for an auditorium is firmly established, no case has ever been proved as to its size. Sizes have been suggested all the way from 2,000 to 6,000 seating capacity. Its size and capacity would exert tremendous influence upon its location. For example, an auditorium with a seating capacity of 6,000 would, in the opinion of the board, require a site fully as large as the entire location at Cathedral Hill. Until agreement is reached as to the size of the auditorium, the necessity for it already having been established, the planning board is in no position to offer any recommendation as to its location.

The second reason for the omission of the auditorium from the civic centre plan lies in the fact that the board has given generous consideration to the idea of acquiring the Royal Theatre for use as an auditorium. The board estimates that the acquisition and conversion of this building, if feasible and consonant with plans as to size, would be far less costly than the acquisition of a new site and the erection of a new building. And this, of course, places the auditorium well within the site of the proposed civic centre.

Tastelessly Pseudo

It had to happen! I could have bet my life on it: the new Government House in appearance, a slightly modernized English Tudor manor with a castellated stone porch. The subjects of Elizabeth I would never have perpetrated anything so tastelessly pseudo.

Pensioners' Rents

During house to house visitations I have been shocked to hear that some landlords are raising rent by $9 a month, from December, just the amount of the raise in old-age pensions.

It would seem, if this is so, that the Dominion and provincial governments are paying the extra $9 into the pockets of landlords rather than aged folks. If this is done, I hope the government will take a hand in putting a stop to it. (Rev.) A. W. GOLLMER.

Advanced Education

In view of the fact that the Russians have launched a second space satellite, I think the time is long past due when we should make a serious study of why Russian scientists have advanced so far ahead of us. Not so long ago the Russians were considered backward in the sciences. Yet to anyone who has watched the advance of their educational activities, in spite of the dictatorship, its cruelty and so on, one cannot but be impressed, and at the same time have a sense of depression at our own educational backwardness.

Today our universities are crowded, and the young people who are attending them are not necessarily those with the greatest ability, or even those who can profit most by a university education.

I believe that gifted school children should be sought out from classes and given an accelerated program of work and not as our present educational system, which leaves vast reservoirs of valuable intelligence in the children from the lower strata. We still have many bright boys and girls in this country who cannot afford to go to our universities.

I believe that the federal and provincial governments should institute a program of education so that all able students regardless of circumstances would receive advanced technical and university training on the same basis of public education as is now afforded our public and high schools.

Four Hurt In Traffic Accidents

Four persons were treated at St. Joseph's Hospital for injuries suffered in traffic accidents Sunday.

At 2:15 p.m. Sunday a car driven by Josephine Zhyovsky, 22, of 2913 Quadra, was turning right from Hillside onto Fifth when it went out of control and struck a power pole, snapping the pole at its base.

Miss Zhyovsky was treated for arm and knee abrasions. Her mother, Mrs. Elvira Zhyovsky, 46, was admitted for treatment to an injured shoulder. John Kearney, 35, of 117 Medina, another passenger, suffered a cut forehead and knee.

Stephen Cousins, 5, of 44 San Jose, was treated for a head cut and facial bruises suffered when he fell from a car on Sunday.

Chamber Pursues Amalgamation Issue

Victoria Chamber of Commerce, which helped start the present controversy over amalgamation in Greater Victoria, plans further action to clear the issue.

Hardy, executive director of the Citizens' Research Council, Toronto, to Victoria on Feb. 25 for a public panel discussion on amalgamation.

Mr. Hardy's report to the chamber and Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce about 12 months ago was that the municipalities should amalgamate with the City of Victoria.

Meanwhile, the chamber's public affairs group last night decided to revive its amalgamation committee and ask that the Jaycees do the same.

The group also revived its auditorium committee and asked the executive committee of the chamber to appoint any new members needed.

Action was taken after president Eric Mallett asked for

Wall Street Overcomes Early Shock

NEW YORK (UPI)—Russia's new satellite helped push stocks down early in the day and helped put them up later.

The discovery which began with the makers of missiles just about wiped out losses in industrial issues.

Wall Street reasoned that the latest Soviet satellite venture would spur our defence effort to the point where inflation might become a serious factor. Inflation is seen as a stock stimulant.

Aircraft—the missile makers—registered gains ranging to more than 2 points in Douglas and Martin and more than a point in the others.

American Potash rose more than 3 in the fertilizer. Chemicals, hard hit for a time, made strong comebacks, notably Du Pont. Steels encountered support. Aluminum firmed after a drop to new lows.

Base Metals Rally

TORONTO (C.P.)—The stock market rallied in the closing minutes to slice the earlier losses by more than one-half. Trading was the slowest in more than three years.

Prices reached their lowest level at noon and then began to creep up, reaching their highs for the day at the close.

Industrial losses ranged to three points, led by Goodyear Tire at 150.

Refining oils, pipelines, utilities and banks were among the heavier losers.

Base metals staged the strongest rally, recovering all their index loss to post a gain of almost one-half point.

Few Gains in Sight

MONTREAL (C.P.)—The Montreal and Canadian stock markets staged a moderate late-afternoon rally but most issues failed to recover their original declines. Trading was unusually light.

Losses of one point were shown by B.C. Power at 37½, Bank of Montreal at 40, Great Lakes Paper at 29, Asbestos at 25½ and Dominion Glass at 33.

Calgary Power at 61 lost 7½. Losers of 1½ were B.A. Oil at 37½, Hudson Bay at 47, and Atlas Steel at 16½.

Trade Slackens

VANCOUVER—With less than 50,000 shares trading hands, the Vancouver Stock Exchange had its quietest day of the year.

Industrial issues were firm with MacMillan at $25½, Woodwards at $10½ and Powell River at $33.

Mines and oils were weak in absence of bids. Trojan drifted to 24 cents. Quaisnois to 27 cents and Peace River Petroleum to 82 cents.

Cowichan firmed near the close to 89 cents after being 85 cents.

Winnipeg (C.P.)—Strong

activity in flax was the feature. The market reached a seasonal high with buying by U.S. interests and international accounts. Prices advanced sharply and liberal offerings appeared on the upturn from commercial houses and in the form of hedges.

Trade in rye showed more activity with buying in evidence from southern sources. Prices scored moderate gains.

Canada's Reactor Tops Free World

OTTAWA (CP)—The free world's most powerful atomic research reactor is in operation at Canada's atomic energy establishment at Chalk River, Ont., 130 miles northwest of Ottawa.

The reactor, known by the code name NRU, was started up Sunday. Atomic Energy of Canada Limited announced.

Atomic Energy Commission. NRU will be used for research and experiments in the development of electricity-producing nuclear power stations.

"As a tool for research, engineering development and testing, the NRU reactor will be unsurpassed," the Crown company's announcement said.

The huge versatile research reactor, which will produce significant quantities of plutonium, the metal used in atomic bombs, began operating six years after construction started. NRU— which stands for National Research Universal—cost $57,000,000 to build.

Optimists Hold Lead In Lower Island Loop

Optimists retained their two-point lead in Division I of the Lower Island Junior and Juvenile Soccer Association Sunday as they played to a 2-2 draw with the second-place Mariners at Windsor Park.

Temper flared continually during the closely-fought contest, and at least one Mariner player faces possible suspension as a result of a fist fight that broke out.

Optimists were down 2-0 after goals by Barry Fredericksen and Larry Lawrence. However, they were awarded a pair of penalty kicks later in the first half which Allan Glen and Jamie Costain made good for the share of points.

In Division V, Britannia upset ANAF Vets, 2-1, and Esquimalt Lions and Eagles played to a 2-2 draw. Division IV action was called off when Langford was unable to field a team, but in a division II game, Langford defeated Texaco, 8-1.

LONDON (Reuters)—Devonport Services beat Barts Hospital yesterday 16-0 in a Rugby Union game.

Eddie Bevan Says "TIME I HAD PROTECTION"

The tough Hamilton Tiger-Cat guard is going to be making the blocks again this year, but he recently announced that he thought it was time that he had protection himself. Said Eddie, "I can take it, but I want to be sure about my car. So this year I'm using 'Prestone' Brand Anti-Freeze. Gives the protection my engine needs. With 'Prestone' Brand Anti-Freeze I know that no rust or corrosion is going to ruin my cooling system. No foaming either. That's just the kind of protection I need."

It's the kind of protection you need too. Insist on "Prestone" Brand Anti-Freeze at your service station.

Rangers Sparked by Substitute Goalie

Marcel Paille, the 24-year-old netminder called up from Providence to try to fill the shoes of the injured Gump Worsley, has proved to New York Rangers, in his first two games at least, that he belongs in the National Hockey League.

Paille stopped Chicago Black

Bruins' losing skid at six games and their goalless string at 125 minutes.

At the other end of the ice, Don Simmons made 26 stops for his first shutout of the season.

Harry Howell won the game for the Rangers, scoring at 7:05 of the third period after Ed Lizenberger had tallied twice to bring the Black Hawks from behind. Red Sullivan, with his fourth goal in three games, and Parker Macdonald got the other Ranger goals.

Boston wrapped up its victory in the first period with two goals. Larry Regan got the first one and Bronco Horvath made 2-0 with the first of his two goals. Gerry Toppazzini closed out the scoring at 2:46 of the third period.

Sawchuk, although he faced 101 shots in two weekend games, still managed to improve his position in the NHL fielding averages. In four games, he stopped 153 of 164 shots fired at him for a .933 average, giving him a .906 mark for the season. The previous week he was trailing all goalies with a .883 mark.

Hodge, called back to the Canadiens after Jacques Plante suffered an asthma attack, has a .929 average and Glen Hall of the Hawks is fourth behind Worsley at .913.

Dream Race Becomes Reality Saturday

NEW YORK (AP) — A "dream race" involving the four top race horses in the United States became a reality Monday when the trainers of Gallant Man and Bold Ruler said their coits would go to Garden State Park to take Round Table and Dedicate in the Trenton Handicap.

The $75,000 added Trenton will be run at a mile and a quarter next Saturday.

Dedicate, owned by Mrs. Jan Burke of New York and Miami, is a five-year-old handicap star, while the others have been battling all year for three-year-old honors. Not only is the three-year-old title at stake, but horse of the year honors as well.

Gallant Man is the little

Irishman bred by the late Aga Khan, and owned by Ralph Lowe of Midland, Tex. Round Table, winner of 11 straight races, is the pride of Travis M. Kerr of Oklahoma City, while Bold Ruler is from the Wheatley Stable of Mrs. Henry Carnegie Phipps of New York and Palm Beach, Fla.

Collectively, the four horses have won 11 stakes of $100,000.

It should be 12, because Dedicate easily won the Atlantic City Handicap, only to be disqualified. During their careers, the four have earned a total of $1,968,299 in purses, of which $1,475,148 was this season.

Dedicate defeated Gallant Man and Bold Ruler in the $100,000 Woodward at Belmont in September, but has never met Round Table.

Klan Brutality?

Minister Flogged By Whites

SELEMA, Ala. (CP) — Three catholics of white men, including one in a "Klan-type" mask, had rapped and manhandled a Negro minister, sheriff Carl A.
Griffin reported last night.

Griffin said the victim, the Rev. J. D. Wesley, was reported lost in "last condition" from wounds inflicted by a horse-drawn and belt while his hands, neck and legs were bound.

The assailants identified Wesley as the father of a beating which took place at about the time of similar beatings of a white man and a Negro.

Wesley told authorities his travellers demanded that he "talk about Negro integration leaders in the state" and that he "be forced to say anything brought up over him."

The fifth county sheriff said one of the attackers was described as wearing a Ku Klux Klan type hat which came down over his face. He said he was still investigating whether the beating was Klan inspired.

Hungry Falcon Lost

Unable To Hunt

Somewhere in Greater Victoria is a five-month-old grey falcon which hasn't eaten for two days.

But don't worry, its master Frank Beebe of the Provincial Museum, says Arctic gyrfalcon "Tundra" is gentle as can be and no more dangerous than a kitten.

"Tundra" was loaned to Mr. Beebe a member of the B.C. Falconry Club by Al Fleming, president of the Vancouver Zooloical Society, and on arrival in Victoria three days ago.

SNAPPED LOOSE

Sunday afternoon the two-foot-high bird saw Mr. Beebe "had just been fed and felt fine" and flew, snapping loose from its swivel at Mr. Beebe's home.

"said the museum official "the bird knows how to fly but he has no experience in hunting and can't fly well enough to catch things."

"He should be very hungry by now. But he's very tame and no dangerous. He'll want to come down and be fed."

BEHIND ON LEG

"Tundra" has a bell on one leg. Anyone who sees him should notify Mr. Beebe at the museum 26111 or at his home, 91115. The falcon is not liable to leave this area since he is hand raised. "He will wish to stay near home."

Advance Guard of Patricias Paves Way for Homecoming

After an absence of 18 years, in Winnipeg, but "B" Company the Patricias are coming home. That's the feeling around the Esquimalt Garrison at Work Point and that's the hope of Maj. Vincent Lilley, second in command of the 1st Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

Maj. Lilley commands an advance party of the unit, which has just ended a tour of duty with NATO forces in Germany.

The Patricias were formed during the First World War and for a few years thereafter were based in Eastern Canada. In 1922 however the regiment came west. Headquarters were in Winnipeg, but "B" Company came to Victoria.

The company remained here until 1939, when the whole unit shifted to the Patricias, but that 25-year period was the longest spent in Victoria by any single military unit.

About 20 of Maj. Lilley's advance party arrived with him yesterday, another 40 will be here by Nov. 12.

All are key personnel in the quartermaster's and adjutant's branches.

A fair portion of the men already did this part of the world home, said Maj. Lilley, "and are looking forward to being posted in what is recognized as one of the best of all available bases."

MAJOR VINCENT LILLEY

The major joined the unit in Britain, Germany, Holland and Winnipeg in 1934 as a private in the machine gun company.

"You were my corporal then remember," he asked turning to Lieut. Col. J. C. Case who is soon to relinquish his command of the garrison.

Maj. Lilley drove across Canada with his wife and son and daughters in the family car, which still sports European licence tags.

The youngest daughter only a few months old was born in Germany, and had to be brought to Canada under a visa.

"We have about 300 married men on strength," said Maj. Lilley, "and between 40 and 50 of these are married while these sports on Victoria leagues overseas. Their brides are from and competitions."

Schools May Be Policed

A uniform procedure for police protection of night functions at Greater Victoria schools will be sought at a meeting to be held this month.

Meeting will be between representatives of Greater Victoria school board and Victoria Saanich Oak Bay and Esquimalt police commissions.

It is believed the meeting was partly sparked by reports of serious disturbances at Esquimalt High School last term.

Reeve A. C. Wurtele of Esquimalt said last night Esquimalt police commission had told Olive A. Kelly, principal of the school, that police are keen to co-operate and requested notification when night functions were to be held.

Esquimalt Police Chief Gilbert Stancombe, Mr. Kelly and Pat Thomas, a teacher at the school who was involved in a disturbance, all refused to comment on the situation.

Ideal for Lazy Folk

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Every gardener who has ever taken a crack at growing the little bulbs—crocuses, snowdrops, scillas and the like—invariably becomes an enthusiast for these colorful and dainty subjects, and wishes he could have masses and masses of them.

The problem here is not the expense, but their short season of bloom. A bed filled with crocus or chionodoxa is out of this world for a couple of weeks, but holds no interest at all for the rest of the season.

One good way of tackling this problem is to combine the planting of these bulbs with alpine plants with a prostrate habit of growth. The bulbs will grow up through the alpine stems after their period of bloom is completed; the alpine take over the job of providing color in the bed, at the same time masking the ripening foliage of the bulbs.

This combination is ideal for the lazy gardener like me, for such a bed maintains itself from year to year with little or no attention at all, for the close growth of the alpine doesn't give weeds much of a chance to get started. It is necessary of course to do a good job of preparation first, getting out every scrap of root of the perennial weeds.

For the bulbs, snowdrops are a must for their coming along at a time when we are all hungry for the sight of flowers in bloom. Chionodoxa too, aptly nicknamed Glory of the Snow, push up their lovely blue flowers early in the year.

Crocuses make a wonderful showing when massed closely, both the common kinds in mixed colors and the more expensive tomanianus imperati, and chrysanthus varieties. Among the daffodils we have such dwarf kinds as the Hoop petticoat, the Cyclamen flowered daffodil, and the dainty white Angel's Tears. Scillas and grape hyacinths, the tiny hardy cyclamen, the winter aconite, and the dwarf bulbous iris are all candidates for the bed of little bulbs.

Once the bulbs are set in position, the carpeting alpine may be planted, and there is a wide choice of subjects for this job. The first to come to mind is Aubrietia, especially the newer named varieties such as Rosea and Pink, the purple Iris Mules and the deep red Barkley Double.

The yellow Anemone saxatilis, common with black flowers of red tint after the bulbs have finished flowering, and in contrast we have the bright pink Aethionema Warley Rose. The alpine phloxes hug the ground, too, and one of the best is a Canadian introduction, the deep red Temiskaming.

Lithospermum Heavenly Blue and Grace Ward are ideal ground covers for the bulbs but are not happy in all soils needing a heavy admixture of leafmould and sand in the ground, with really first planting. Fortunately the leafmould and sand soil mixture suits the little bulbs too, and they thrive in company with the acid-loving Lithospermum family.

Freshness First Essential

The documentary a word which has a dull and heavy sound has come a long long way on television. There are now a good many experienced film cutters and directors and technicians of all sorts who are extraordinarily expert at piecing together old news reels, tracing films and searching films from hundreds of sources, piecing them into almost any subject you can name.

One of the more ambitious of the new series is "The Twentieth Century." The opening show was a sort of biography of the man of the century Winston Churchill, and I find I have written on my notes the words "a logical choice."

But that was before I saw it. After I saw it I was not at all sure it was a logical choice or even a wise one. For Churchill's magnificent photographic, witty, elegant and lustre-splattered though he has been, he has been doing it for many years. It is not that Winston Churchill is a great man, but if you are going to tackle that splendid old man, you had best have some thing new and challenging to offer, either in pictures or in point of view or in new material. Something must be fresh or there is no point in doing it.

The point is to educate and stimulate and educate us and you can't do that with material that is so terribly familiar, important and endearing as Mr. Churchill is.

"Twentieth Century" was a good show, though, was the very model of what a show of this nature ought to be. For one thing its subject guided missiles, could hardly have been more timely. For another it is important and the material to me at least was full of fresh new information I didn't know anything about.

A good documentary should not only amuse and entertain you but leave you with the thoroughly vicious feeling that you have committed to a bit of self-education. I must admit that is a tall order, but I think it can be done and the documentary on guided missiles did it.

I was especially intrigued by the opening shots which purported to be the faces of Englishmen and women watching puzzled as the first V-2, the winged missile, flew over the land. The wonderment, only slightly marred by fear in those faces, was most tellingly effective.

CBS also dug up some amazingly effective captured German film showing the early V-2's exploding and exploding at Peenemuende. These films are 13 years old but they had the feeling of great immediacy about them because this is very much a contemporary problem.

Alan Stays to Star

HOLLYWOOD (CANADIAN) Vancouver-born and -raised Alan Young went to England last April for a six-week vacation with his wife and children. He stayed in star in a TV series, "Personal Appearance." And is now playing a top role in George Pal's picture for MGM, "Tom Thumb."

Alan was one of the first to have his own TV shows in America. The weekly blood sweat and tears almost killed him.

Lauren Bacall's immediate plans include neither a marriage nor a lengthy stay in New York. "I don't want any more responsibility at this point," she "adored" Frank Sinatra's "Pal Joey," and thinks he's "the greatest, the craziest."

Robert Stack-Bacall's co-star in "The Gift of Love" expects to do "The Alamo" with John Wayne. "What a man! In this town there are too many half-men but there's one man. When he's generous, he's generous; there's nothing phony about him." I agree. That's why men as well as women like Wayne.

Not only has Mrs. Rossano Brazzi lost pounds, but handsome husband Rossano himself has shed 10 pounds—in Hawaii when was just when they went there for "South Pacific." They are still talking on the island of Lydax Room. To judge by her laughter it was something less than nothing.

Ann Sheridan doing the town with long-time buddy Jacques Maupre. I remember when Annie was the oomph girl of Hollywood—about 18 years ago. Now the accolade belongs to Kim Novak. I hope she will look as good in 1975 as Sheridan does now.

Grace Kelly, who loves to gamble, goes to neighboring Shirley Maclaine will make one more picture after "The Sheepman," then have another baby. Hal Wallis, who "owns" Shirley for another three years, wanted to extend the contract and give her more money. But the pensive star said "No I'll stick with this and get it over—then decide about the future."

Dan Duryea charges $10,000 more for playing a screen menace. "I want $40,000 for a sympathetic role," says Dan, "and $50,000 to play the heavy Newadaya. I'd rather be the hero. And I'm afraid if someone offers me a good comedy role in a musical, I'd do it for free." Oh, yeah?

Winning Contract

By Howard Schenken and Richard L. Frey

won the first spade and returned a trump, won by South. The club ace put dummy in for a finesse of the 10 of diamonds. West gathered in the jack and returned a second trump, leaving dummy with only one. But thanks to West's double of five diamonds, one was enough.

Declarer won the trump, cashed the diamond ace and pushed the queen through. West refused to cover but declarer took the finesse. The next diamond lead smoked out West's king killed with dummy's remaining trump. Declarer lost only one spade and one diamond.

If you are critical of East's failure to bid five spades as a sacrifice especially in view of his skimpy distributional opening, forget the fact that it would have been down but two tricks even if South got a club ruff. East had already indicated by bidding four spades over four hearts, that he did not have a defensive type of hand. He bid to respect his partner's double of five diamonds as a warning that West also held defence against five hearts and a request not to take the save.

Of course West could expect to defeat five diamonds. But he should have been glad to let the opponents play that contract. Since he had no defence against hearts, and since it was almost certain that North would correct the contract the double of five diamonds was of no value except to the enemy. Without it, declarer no doubt would have played for a diamond split instead of taking the finesse against West's king. If he had ruffed the third diamond, of course he would have lost the hand.

For example, consider West's double of five diamonds. East

Shakespeare was talking about life but he might have been describing some of the doubles offered up in every bridge game. A tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, only in the last two words does the description fail. Far from "signifying nothing," such doubles can be highly significant and helpful to the enemy.

Cowichan Copper Will Sell to Japan

Bottles Flying In Chase

NANAIMO — While the RCMP highway patrol here chased a car at speeds of up to 95 miles an hour down the Island Highway toward Nanaimo Sunday, a front-seat passenger in the fugitive car was busily engaged in throwing out beer bottles.

Police were alerted by radio of a car being driven in an erratic manner. They lay in wait at the Somerset Hotel, to see the car, driven by a Victorian man, Alvin Piercy Miller, flash by.

First out, the police speeded up to 70 miles an hour but Miller's car began to pull away. Police accelerated to 80 but still Miller was increasing the gap. At the 95-mile-an-hour mark, Miller pulled in at Waddington Road and awaited the police car.

A $75 fine was imposed after Miller pleaded guilty to driving without reasonable consideration for other road-users. Despite a "clean" licence, a nine-month licence suspension was ordered by Magistrate Lionel Beevor-Potts.

Save That Gravel

NANAIMO — Vancouver Island fish and game clubs have been urged to study a notice of motion from Chemainus Rod and Gun Club which seeks to curtail gravel removal from river beds.

Chemainus is asking that any gravel removal or stream diversion be subject to department of recreation and conservation and federal department of fisheries approval.

$1,000 FINE
Secretary Jack Whitelaw said the resolution had been prompted because of an incident in Chemainus River last fall which resulted in a court case. Fine of $1,000 was imposed on a shovel operator "but this did not begin to pay for the damage which was done," said Mr. Whitelaw.

by O. G. MacDonald, president of Cowichan Copper.

Mr. MacDonald, who has just arrived back from a 15-days' stay in Japan, said in Vancouver last night that two Japanese

Truck Rider Killed

NANAIMO — A 15-year-old Ladysmith high school student, James Matthew Smillie, was dead on arrival at Nanaimo General Hospital late Saturday night after being thrown from the back of a half-ton truck.

Inquest opened in Nanaimo last night for the identification of the body and selection of a jury panel.

Smillie and a 16-year-old companion, Richard Gregson, also of Ladysmith, were travelling home from Nanaimo in the back of the truck when it failed to negotiate a curve and left the highway. It turned over at least once, police said.

Gregson received only superficial injuries and was in Ladysmith Hospital Sunday.

Four juveniles, including the 16-year-old driver, were travelling inside the cab. They received minor injuries.

Smillie was killed just a week before his 16th birthday. He was one of six children of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Smillie, and was well known in local softball circles.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday, with burial in Cedar Valley Memorial Gardens.

Bus Display Cancelled

Display of a new long-distance German bus at Vancouver Island Coach Lines depot today has been cancelled because, officials said, of "unforeseen difficulties" in getting the bus into Canada from the U.S.

firms had undertaken to purchase a minimum of 1,000 tons a month of 25 per cent concentrate copper over the next three years.

The deal has been completed with Sumitomo Shoji Kaisha Ltd. and Daiichi Bussan Kaisha Ltd., acting as agents for various Japanese copper smelters.

traded for in the first two years will be valued at about $5,000,000. Prices for the third year have not yet been decided.

"Only a few minor details have yet to be settled," said Mr. MacDonald. "We have agreed on the major issues."

Under the deal, Cowichan Copper, whose mill at Lake Cowichan is expected to go into production later this year, will ship a minimum of 1,000 tons of concentrates a month, and expects to raise the amount to 1,500 tons in the second year and 2,000 tons in the third year.

"Prices have been fixed for the first two years, and as a result we shall get a better return for our concentrates than we would if we had to sell to the U.S. smelter at Tacoma," said Mr. MacDonald.

The concentrates will be shipped from a deep-sea loading dock as near as possible to the Cowichan Lake Mill.

Mr. MacDonald said he hoped to negotiate right away for a suitable piece of property.

He added that although the contract was for a minimum of

If you suffer from rheumatic and arthritic pains, try ZARUMIN, the new pill-within-a-pill. ZARUMIN contains an outer pill that brings 3 to 4 hours of fast, effective pain relief. Several hours later, the inner pill dissolves, rushing 3 to 4 hours additional relief. Thus, you get more complete overnight relief from pains of stiff, aching joints.
